This game is interesting and unpredictable. I'm working on phase edge fever right now and they weren't laughing. Personally, I thought it was exactly the sixth night, but damn, I was wrong. Sixth night on steroids. Here are some tips for problematic animatronics. CHIKA: Take care of the left hole if you see him handing the mask to the office for at least 3-5 seconds or he still doesn't hear repeated footsteps. Bonnie: If you see her in your office, put the mask on as soon as you see her when you use the camera. Otherwise they will strangle you. BB: This little son of a nightmare sucks. He follows the same pattern as Chika, so follow him until you disappear footsteps or hear his annoying laughter. Foxy: Appears in the hallway when you see her shuffle twice and checks your vents when someone blinks three times there and starts her when the starting mask and then turns her on. Music Box and then repeat the steps until it comes out. Lego: It's simple, but very annoying. Win this game box as many times as you can before killing. When the screen has a red warning signThe music box holds light and load. I find this very effective against him and use this strategy when someone actually cheats on me. These are the suggestions that I can offer. I hope you survive these five/six long nights! In 2020 I was a big fan of FNAF in November and learned pretty much everything about the story and the characters. I love the gameplay and the creepy atmosphere you get when you are inaugurated by Toy Chika in the main lobby. But I think you did a little glamorous with a lack of the main lobby. Don't say it's bad. I also like this strange sound that is played by chance. It makes me very careful and think "Oh no, is someone in my trail?!". I also find it really cool to have to be very careful when packing a playful for a doll when someone is in the hallway because you just have to trust that nobody is there. Even if you have the feeling that you think: "Oh, I might want to end it", but then you freak out! I love all unresolved mysteries such as Shadow Bonnie, Paper Pals, Shadow Freddy and JJ. However, there is only one problem with the game: Erina Balloon !!! And wait? Can't it repair? Oh good. I think I could take a few more hundred years. I recently searched whether I could find the balloons that lead to your ventilation openings. I find it strange that you can't see him well when he gets to you. The same applies to Foxy that I still don't like, I love him so much! And why does Chica lose her beak when she leaves the stage? Please (not) repair! Great game and keep doing great games. After finally ending Five Nights at Freddy's 1 from the indie game developer Scott Cawthon, I decided that it would be a pleasure to go on to the next game! Every time I start the game, I stick to my ear because I cannot overcome this strange opening music! Great! Although the multifunctional part is oneI'm seriously struggling; 0, but it's better! As it turns out, it's only night 4 and I've practiced a lot with FNAF 1 and the other FNAF 2 nights, so I think I can walk through them and hold the music box, blink fox on fox and put on a mask if necessary. I just need to practice a little. In general in-game great graphics, not as realistic as one might think compared to a particular performance complemented by reality (AR) or virtual reality needing help (VR), but that makes me certainly scary. Due to the type of headphones I use on some occasions or when I turn the volume all the way up and completely lose my alertness - Scott definitely outperformed in this game! FNA's favorite characters would have to be Ft Freddy (punishing Freddy) and Bon Bon (his hand puppet). I can't wait to go to FNAF 3, 4, 5 and possibly SL (related location / FNAF 6) to finally meet and guide Ft Freddy! The rating is over. Cy!
