Gender Equality Index 2017: Spain

The Gender Equality Index 2017 examines the progress and challenges in achieving gender equality across the European Union from 2005 to 2015. Using a scale from 1 (full inequality) to 100 (full equality), it measures the differences between women and men in key domains of the EU policy framework (work, money, knowledge, time, power and health). The index also measures violence against women and intersecting inequalities. These are satellite domains and are part of the framework of the Gender Equality Index, but do not have an impact on the overall score. Intersecting inequalities show how gender intersects with age, education, family composition, country of birth and disability. The Gender Equality Index provides results for each domain and sub-domain for the EU and its 28 Member States (1).

Progress in gender equality in Spain, 2005-2015

In the Gender Equality Index 2017, Spain achieved a score of 68.3 out of 100. This is slightly above the EU-28 score of 66.2. Progress is happening at a faster pace than in the EU on average. Spain's score has increased by 6.1 points. It is 11th in the EU, which represents a drop of two positions since 2005.

All the domain scores have increased.

The gender equality score in the domain of health is the highest in Spain and has slightly increased. It shows near-gender balance in access to medical and dental services.

The biggest improvement took place in the domain of power. It has become significantly more gender equal, though its score has remained the lowest in Spain. Women's representation in decision-making positions in the economic sector has increased significantly, whereas it has decreased in the political sector. Spain's score in the political sub-domain is the 4th highest in the EU-28.

The score of the domain of money is the second highest in Spain. Although the score has slightly increased, Spain's rank dropped by three positions to 17th place due to some drawbacks in income distribution and in the rate of poverty.

The situation in the domain of work has improved, but continued gender segregation has impeded progress. Spain's score in the sub-domain of participation in the labour market ranks among the lowest in the EU-28.

In Spain, gender equality in the domain of knowledge has improved since 2005. As in the domain of work, gender segregation remains a relevant issue.

The score in the domain of time has also increased. Women are still doing most of the caring, educating, cooking, and cleaning, but gender gaps have decreased. On the other hand, the situation has stalled in relation to the gender division of the time allocated to social activities.

(1) The Gender Equality Index 2017 is based on the data of Eurostat (Education statistics, EU Labour Force Survey, European Health Interview Survey, EU Statistics on Income and Living Conditions, Structure of Earnings Survey), of Eurofound (European Quality of Life Survey, European Working Conditions Survey), of EIGE's Gender Statistics Database (Women and Men in Decision-Making) and of the Fundamental Rights Agency's Violence Against Women survey. The year of reference is 2015 (2014 for data on intersecting inequalities). The age of the reference population for the indicators is either 15+, 16+ or 18+, depending on the source.

Gender equality index 2017 methodological report.

The Index is a comprehensive measure for assessing the state of the art and monitoring progress in gender equality across the EU over time. It shows the different outcomes of EU and national policies for women and men and supports the development and implementation of evidence-based policymaking in the area of gender equality. This means Europe has a duty to act. Our Gender Equality Index clearly shows whether government policies are matching the specific needs of women and men and whether they are working or not' said Virginija Langbakk, Director of European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE). "The updated Gender Equality Index shows where Europe stands today. The new results of the Gender Equality Index show that across all areas of life inequality prevails. Additionally, it gives insights into violence against women and intersecting inequalities. This year I will propose further measures to help empower women and address the gender pay gap. The top performing country is Sweden with a score of 82.6, while Greece moved to the bottom with 50 points. Since its launch in 2013, the Gender Equality Index has been recognised for its notable contribution to policy debates and increased awareness about gender equality at the EU and national levels. This report documents the third edition of the Gender Equality Index of the European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE). We are still a long way off from reaching a gender-equal society and all countries in the European Union have room to improve. It relies on a conceptual framework that embraces different theoretical approaches to gender equality and integrates key gender equality issues within the EU policy framework. The Index measures gender gaps and takes into account the context and different levels of achievement of Member States within a range of relevant policy areas: work, money, knowledge, time, power and health. It gives more visibility to areas that need improvement and ultimately supports policy makers to design more effective gender equality measures. Equality is not about making women more like men, but about creating an environment where both sexes can have equal choices and fully participate in social, work and family life', said Věra Jourová, Commissioner for Justice, Consumers and Gender Equality. The EU's score is just four points higher than ten years ago, now 66.2 out of 100. The award for the most improved country goes to Italy, which made a big leap and gained 12.9 points to place itself at rank 14 on the ladder." 'We are moving forward at a snail's pace. The third edition provides scores for 2005, 2010, 2012 and 2015. The Index has six core domains - work, money, knowledge, time, power and health - and two satellite domains: violence against women and intersecting inequalities. We are moving forward but overall progress is very slow.
