Unfortunately, I can't try one out as I'm stuck on an island in the middle of the Atlantic (Madeira), so I'm trying to make 'best guess'. I know that ultimately both 'will fit', but it's more than a little confusing and try as I might, I just can't make a decision. My last road bike was a Kinesis Racelight GF Ti Disc in a size 57 which fitted me well, but again, half of the dimensions sit with the 56 Cannondale and half with the 58. My main concern is that 56 may leave me with too much seatpost and possibly needing a longer stem, whereas the 58 (by virtue of the frame design) seems to have a very large standover measurement (not wishing to damage the low-hanging fruit). I believe the 58 also runs 175 cranks rather than 172.5. I'm a mountain biker at heart (and an unfit one that prefers going downhill than up), and I'm not super flexible. I've never been able to ride with super-slammed positions (before the Kinesis I had a Giant TCR Advanced in smaller size that I struggled with and before that a Cinelli Pro Best Of in size XL which worked really well for me), so I guess the longer headtube of the 58 may help me? I know that this forum is filled with Cannondale converts, so maybe someone can give me some pointers? (btw, I know the Synapse would be a better option, but I have found a killer deal on the Supersix and I reckon I can just about live with the semi-compact gearing on this island until I can get back to the relatively flats of the New Forest UK where the bike will really come into it's own). Interestingly, Canyon places me at the bottom of a 56 on the Ultimate. cheers fa63 Posts: 2515 Joined: Mon Feb 19, 2007 7:26 am Location: Atlanta, GA, US by fa63 on Sun Apr 19, 2020 8:14 pm I think you will be fine from a standover perspective (83.1 cm on a 58 cm frame, so you should have over 3 cm clearance when you factor in your shoes). Otherwise, it comes down to your flexibility and fit preferences. The 56 cm frame has a much lower front end (by 2 cm) while having only ~0.5 cm shorter reach compared to the 58 cm frame. So if you like your handlebar low, then go for 56 cm. If not, go for 58 cm. I am pretty much exactly the same height and inseam as you, and I think I would go with a 58 cm frame because I wouldn't want to have a ton of spacers under the stem and/or an positive rise stem. florianasantana Posts: 208 Joined: Thu Dec 25, 2014 8:57 pm by florianasantana on Mon Apr 20, 2020 7:37 am Go with the size 56. I'm exactly your height with a 88 cm inseam. And I'm riding a 56 cm 2020 SuperSix Evo Disc frameset with no spacers at all which looks great. The saddle to bar drop isn't particularly big, so even if you are not very flexible, you should be fine even with a slammed stem. I'm 183cm and moved from a ML TCR with a lot of post showing to a 56cm 2020 SSe and am very happy with the fit (18mm of spacers IIRC). I run 80cm from crank centre to saddle flat if it helps The right size bike for your body size is essential to ensure the optimum experience, comfort and enjoyment as you ride. HollowGram 45 KNØT Wheels An evolution of our wide, ultra-fast, low-drag rim profile with a light, versatile 45mm depth. Maintains high aerodynamic efficiency even with big tires. Look for 45 KNØT wheels on select models. Brief description The stunning Candy Red colourway and extremely clean design will attract your attention to the 2021 Cannondale SuperSix EVO Hi-MOD Disc Ultegra. But it's the riding experience and the speed this bike achieves that will keep you attracted to it, and will easily make this your favourite bike. A lightweight frameset and a careful choice of components make this an excellent pick. Detailed explanation Cannondale has an extensive range of road bikes, but the SuperSix EVO Hi-MOD Disc Ultegra provides a balance few others do. It gives you their extremely lightweight BallisTec Hi-MOD Carbon fibre frame, and pairs it with reliable components for excellent riding experience. Kicking things off with the frame, this is Cannondale's 'fast just got faster' frame. It's an evolution of a classic race machine that is light, smooth and ultra-fast. The aero tubes are low-drag and get you 30% better aerodynamic performance over the predecessor. Thru-axle systems at the front and rear keep steering precise and agile, making the 2021 Cannondale SuperSix EVO Hi-MOD Disc Ultegra a do-it-all bike for the open road, both up and down the hills. The components are a combination of Shimano's Ultegra and 105 groupsets, with Ultegra hydraulic disc brakes providing plenty of stopping power. The wheels are HollowGram 35 carbon fibre wheels, which maintain a low rotational weight and keep you rolling fast. Whether you're looking at a new racing bike, or just want one of the fastest bikes out there to help you push your limits, Cannondale's SuperSix EVO Hi-MOD Disc Ultegra is the carbon fibre road bike to make it happen. Technical features Hi-MOD BallisTec carbon fibre frameset with a SAVE micro-suspension system for excellent speed and plenty of comfort. Integrated cable routing solution keeps cables neatly tucked inside the frameset for a clean look and better aero performance. Carbon fibre Cannondale HollowGram 35 wheels are extremely durable and keep weight low. Cannondale Wheel Sensor sends route and speed data to your smartphone for a connected experience.
