If you have received a JPEG file and aim to change it to JPG image format, then use our best JPEG to JPG converter to turn .JPEG into .JPG image format, yes, it entirely free! Is JPG the Same as JPEG? In actual, there's no difference between the JPG and JPEG formats. The only difference that is considered is the number of characters used. Since the JPG image format exists only in the earlier versions of Windows (MS-DOS 8.3 and FAT-16 file systems), they required just a three letter extension for the file names. So, .JPEG extension name was shortened to .jpg. Even technically there is nothing that differentiates JPG vs JPEG. They both are essentially the same image file format in that JPEG and JPG are categorized as raster images and use lossy compression.
