C template class multiple definition

Classes – Inheritance

Inheritance is accomplished by using a derivation, which means a class is declared by using a base class from which it inherits data and behavior. A base class is specified by appending a colon and the name of the base class following the derived class name, like this:

public class Manager : Employee {
    // Employee fields, properties, methods and events are inherited
    // New Manager fields, properties, methods and events go here...

When a class declares a base class, it inherits all the members of the base class except the constructors.

In the above example all the methods and properties of the "Employee" class will be available to the "Manager" class, without declaring them inside the manager class

- Specify the Promotion class as a child of the Product class.
- The Promotion class has three member functions:
  - constructor with arguments: to initialize all the parent's attributes.
  - calcDisc: to return discounted price. The discount rate of promotion product is 15%.
  - calcAfterDisc: to return price after discount. It needs to invoke the calcDisc function.
  - displayDetails: to display a product's name, price and discounted price onto the screen in the following format (please refer to the sample output given in Figure 6):

?????	?????	00.00	0.00
-------	-------	-------	------

It needs to invoke the parent's displayDetails function.

Task 3:

- Specify the Regular class as a child of the Product class.
- The Regular class has three member functions:
  - Constructor with arguments: to initialize all the member attributes for the class, including the parent's attributes.
  - calcAftDisc: to return the price.
  - displayDetails: to display a product's name, price and whitespace onto the screen. in the following format (please refer to the sample output given in Figure 6):

????? ??????  ##.##  (whitespace)

It needs to invoke the parent's `displayDetails` function.

Task 4:

In Staff class, do the following tasks:

- Define all the member variables of the class.
- Complete the readInput function definition. The function reads the values from the keyboard for id, name, date and time check in of the staff. It needs to invoke the readDate and readTime functions.
- Complete the addSales function definition. The function assigns the element in the array of Product pointers and the element in the integers array with the passed arguments. It also updates the number of promotion, regular and all sales.
- Complete the displayInfoStaff function definition. The function displays the id, name, date, and time check in of the staff in the following format (please refer to the sample output given in Figure 6):

Id      : ?????
Name    : ????? ?????
Date    : ##-##-####
Time    : ##:## ??

- c) Complete the displayInfoSales function definition. The function displays the information of all the sales in the following format (please refer to the sample output given in Figure 6):

1.	????? ?????	??,??	?.??	?	??,??
2.	????? ?????	??,??	?.??	?	??,??
3.	????? ?????	??,??		?	??,??
