Desmond EarleyMo Ghile Mear (SATTBB) arr. The first known of these modern pub sessions took place in 1947 in the town of Camden of London in a bar called Devonshire Arms (although some ethnomusicologists believe that Irish immigrants in the United States may have held sessions before that;) the practice was introduced only later to Ireland. Its modern form had come to the end of the 18th century Jackson Limerick piper and the pipemaker of Tandragee William Kennedy, the Anglican cleric Canon James Goodman (1828-1896) and his friend John Hingston de Skibbereen. The Celtic harp, seen in the Irish coinage and used in Guinness advertising, was played for as long as the 10th century. There are several collections of folk musicof the xviii century, but it was not until the xixth century that the ballad printers established Dublin. The actual achievement of independence from Britain tallied closely with a new Irish government also paid heed to clerical calls to curtail 'jazz dancing' and other suggestions of a dereliction in Irish morality¢ÃÂÂthough it was not until 1935 that the Public Dance Halls Act curtailed the right of anyone to hold their own events; from then on, no public musical or dancing events could be held in a public space without a license and most of those were usually only granted to 'suitable' persons ¢Ã often the parish priest.Combined with continued emigration, and the priesthood's inevitable zeal in closing down un-licensed events, the upshot was to drive traditional music and dancing back into the cottage where it remained until returning migrants persuaded pub owners to host sessions in the early 1960s.SeáÂn ÃÂ Riada's The Chieftains, The Clancy Brothers, The Irish Rovers, The Dubliners and Sweeney's Men were in large part responsible for a second wave of revitalisation of Irish Rovers, The bouzouki only entered the traditional Irish music world in the late 1960s. The word bodhrÃ;Ân, indicating a drum, is first mentioned in a translated English document in the 17th century. Formed in 1970 Horslips were the first Irish group to have the terms 'Celtic rock' applied to them, produced work that included traditional Irish/Celtic music and instrumentation, Celtic themes and imagery, concept albums based on Irish mythology in a way that entered the territory of progressive rock all powered by a hard rock sound. One of the most important instruments in the traditional repertoire, the violin (or violin) is played differently in very varied regional styles. This revival was helped in part by a loose movement of musicians founded in 1951 with the aim of preserving traditional music, Comhaltas Ceoltóirí Éireann, which led to the popular Fleadh Cheoil (music festival). The 1960s saw several innovative artists. New groups that appeared in their wake included Moving hearts formed by Dónal Lunny and Christy Moore and presenting Davy Spillane in uilleann pipes - the first time that this actually happened in a rock scene. Van Morrison is also known for the trad-rock scene, and is known for incorporating soul and R&B.Celtic fusion in Ireland that incorporating soul and themes in a context of rock music. - The Devil's Galop - Dick Barton Theme Devil's Galop: Following a series of requests from...
